

ABSTRACT OF THE INVENTION

An optical compensation film for a liquid crystal display is provided wherein the film is a polymer that is capable of producing light induced anisotropy. The film is irradiated with light to form an optical axis or axes.